

iSequent Wins Award Recognizing It As One of the Best Venture Capital Opportunities in Canada

Toronto, ON – May 16, 2006 – iSequent Inc., a Canadian financial services software company, today announced it won a Victor Award at the 2006 Canadian Venture Forum. This award recognizes the best venture capital investment opportunities as voted for by the members of the venture capital community in attendance at the three-day Forum.

At the Forum, iSequent demonstrated its product StreetVision, a web-based portal which investment industry professionals use to initiate relationships, disseminate ideas, evaluate performance and aggregate information through its I.D.E.A. Exchange. StreetVision's I.D.E.A. Exchange resolves two critical challenges facing the investment community – information overflow and accountability in the allocation of commissions.

“It is very exciting for iSequent to win a Victor Award,” said Mel Barsky, president, iSequent. “This award demonstrates that the VC community recognizes the strength of our business model, experience of our management team and absolute need for our software StreetVision.”

iSequent was founded in 2005 through the combined efforts of industry participants and successful technology entrepreneurs. The foundation of the company is built on the notion of making the financial services industry more accountable and more transparent with more efficient communication for all involved -- investors, sales people and managers.
